BUS COMPANY AHEAD
NEW YORK May 25 (UP)—A New York bus company lost and found a bus today and discovered it was slightly ahead on the gas tank content.

The bus, a 36-passenger affair, was found in Brooklyn Sunday after it had apparently been used for a weekend picnic trip. The gas tank held 50 gallons when it was stolen. It contained slightly more than that amount when recovered.

LEGAL WIDOW
ELIZABETH N. J. May 23 (UP)—Mrs. Anna Van Bramer, 85, was legally a "widow" today, 48 years after her husband walked out of the house and never came back.

Mrs. Van Bramer said she had not seen her husband since 1905 when he disappeared from their home in the Bronx. He was declared officially dead by a court Friday so Mrs. Van Bramer could comply with legal regulations for a real estate transaction.

Dr. McFarland Paratrooper Training Saves Man In Last Night

The Rule book is working again," Dr. Kenneth McFarland told the 1953 graduating class at Murray State College here last night.

"In the 1930s nothing worked," he said. "During the 1940s all things worked, but now the rules are in force once more."

In the college's 30th commencement 221 students were awarded degrees by Dr. Ralph H. Woods, MSC president, as more than 10,000 looked on.

"Now it is not what the public can do for you, but what you can do for the public," Dr. McFarland, educationist consultant for General Motors and formerly guest lecturer for the Readers Digest, went on.

"You can't do business long on successfully except by the golden rule," he said. "Even from a selfish standpoint, it is the only rule that works."

"He that would be greatest among you let him be the servant of all," the speaker concluded.

"Although still important, it is not enough to know something. You've got to be somebody and do something."

Winners were June Foy, Murray High School, in dress; Bobby Stubbins, New Concord, in public speaking; Marlene Myers, Lynn Grove, dress; and Bubby Anderson, Kirksey, in seed and livestock breed identification.

Dr. McFarland Paratrooper Training Saves Man In Last Night

Tom, Grace Jr., 27, a hardy ex-paratrooper, tumbled eleven stories off a building project, tried to rise to his feet and then joked with astonished fellow workers.

"Hey, I must have forgotten my parachute," he said before he was rushed to a hospital Saturday. The husky bachelor tells about the fall in his own words.

By TOM GRACE JR.
As Told to United Press
CHICAGO May 26 (UP)—It was my paratrooper training that saved my life today when I fell off the 11th floor of the job I was working on.

All I felt was fear.

But I instinctively went through all the motions that they taught us in jump training during the war when I was with the 11th Airborne and made eight combat jumps over Luzon.

I was using a power drill to cut a hole in concrete when it happened.

The walls aren't on the building yet, and I was working pretty close to the edge.

All of a sudden the drill hit a snag of some kind and twisted around.

It threw me toward the edge of the floor and I teetered for a second, trying to get my balance. Then I fell off into space.

I didn't have time to pray. I guess I thought for a second about my mom and dad and sister Rosanna.

Then I was falling, falling and all I felt was fear.

I had jumped from much higher during the war. But this time there was no chute.

I was falling almost head first, so I shifted around so I wouldn't land on my head. I guess I might have instinctively clutched for that emergency ripcord that wasn't there.

I kept feeling something would happen to save my life.

At the third floor level, I hit a projection that stuck out from the building. I bounced off, and then fell the remaining three floors into a pile of earth that was soft from last night's rain.

I was relaxed when I hit and I guess that helped.

As soon as I landed, tried to get up. My back hurt and I could

Boosters Make Stop Here

The Nashville Booster Club came to Murray this morning to extend a welcome from Nashville to the group.

The large group, in three Greyhound buses, was preceded by a contingent from the Grand Ole Opry, who entertained the group until the main group arrived.

Spokesmen for the group extended a welcome from Nashville and commented on the progress of Murray.

Mayor Ben West of Nashville made a short talk in which he made Mayor George Hart of Murray an honorary citizen of Nashville.

Mayor Hart was also made a member of the Nashville Booster Club.

The group spent the night at the Kenlake Hotel last night and morning. They were accompanied by a State Police patrol car, two Tennessee State Highway Patrolmen, and a Davidson County patrol car.

After a short and entertaining program, the large group again entered their buses for their next stop at Paris, Tennessee.

They will go from Paris to Milan, Tennessee.

Several members of the Booster Club have Murray representatives, and many of the club members mixed with the crowd distributing some token of their business.

Fifth Grade Students Make Wildlife Tour

The fifth grade of the Murray Training School went to the Kentucky Woodland Refuge recently for the purpose of studying the soil and the wildlife there.

There are 68,000 acres in this refuge that is operated by the government. It was taken over in 1937 and since that time it has been used for the conservation of wildlife.

Included in the wildlife there are bobcats, raccoons, wild turkey and three species of deer.

Mr. Cunningham of the refuge, explained how this territory became a better place for the growth of wildlife, by seeding the land with wild rice and other grasses.

After leaving the refuge, the group came by the Kenlake Hotel to enjoy the scenery. Buses were used to make the trip.

Those going with the pupils were Miss Lofte Sutter, Miss Mary Solters, T. P. Sholar, Bob Eulin, and Elmer Schweiss.

Atomic Mortars Others Forseen

LAS VEGAS, Nev. May 26 (UP)—Congressional and military observers today foresaw atomic mortars, bazookas and cannons for naval ships.

The nation's leaders declared themselves highly pleased over the successful firing of the first atomic artillery shell, which exploded 500 feet above Frenchman Flat Monday.

The half ton of streamlined steel with an atomic warhead was fired from a 288-millimeter cannon, "Amazon Annie," and screeched seven miles across the desert before exploding with the force of 10,000 tons of TNT.

The new A-shell, fired on the proving grounds 65 miles northwest of here, greatly impressed both congressional observers and military leaders who predicted it would revolutionize the fighting of wars.

Rep. E. W. Hiestand (R.-Calif.) chaired the target area above which the atomic shell exploded.

"From all appearances of the target area," Hiestand commented, "it is the atomic shell is extremely accurate."

He added he could see no reason why atomic shells couldn't be designed for use in naval guns aboard battleships, cruisers and other vessels.

Other congressmen who witnessed the test suggested the scientists might next be able to build atomic mortars and bazookas.

Hiestand and other congressional observers reported that about half of the 16 pieces of railroad equipment, including a 45-ton diesel locomotive and among the target area, had been toppled by the shell burst.

May Boycott Truce Sessions Beginning On Yesterday

SEOUL, Korea May 26 (UP)—President Syngman Rhee indicated today the South Korean government might complicate the stalled truce talks by boycotting the Panmunjom sessions indefinitely.

Rhee called his cabinet to an extraordinary three-hour and 45-minute session to discuss "certain measures" in connection with the stalled negotiations.

The boycott apparently started Monday when the South Korean delegate, Major Gen. Chai Duk Son, failed to show up at Panmunjom.

Choi's explanation for his absence was that he was talking on a telephone at the Allied truce camp at Munsan when the negotiations

100 Reporters At Coronation For The UP

LONDON May 26 (UP)—The United Press has assembled a staff of 100 reporters, editors, photographers and technicians to cover the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, one week from today.

Covering the story is a tremendous journalistic undertaking. It involves the news and picture reporting of an event that has as its stage the entire area of central London. An estimated 2,000,000 persons will assemble on coronation day to see the spectacle.

Harry Ferguson, executive editor of the United Press, has arrived here from New York to assume general charge of the coronation story.

Hugh Baillie, president of the UP in London in line with his practice of years of being on the scene of big news events. Today he contrasted the present mood of London with that of the many other times he has been here for momentous news stories.

"The British are in a gala spirit," Baillie said. "The faces of so many in the crowds show expressions of awe, almost ecstasy, as they gaze at the decorations and royal trappings. London is a mood of exaltation. It's a long way from the dark days of the war crisis in 1939, the blackout, the menace of the invasion, the bombings, the interminable nights when London itself was one of the great battle fields of history."

The UP has brought into London writers from the United States and continental Europe to supplement the London staff. Split-second arrangements have been made for movement by special messenger through the streets of photographs for radio transmission around the world.

12 Communist MIGs Downed

SEOUL, Korea May 26 (UP)—American Sabrejets shot down 12 Communist MIGs, and damaged a 13th today in blazing dogfights over North Korea.

It was the second time this month the Sabrejets shot down Communist MIGs, and damaged a 13th today in blazing dogfights over North Korea.

Major James Jabara of Wichita, Kans., history's first jet ace now on his second tour of Korea at his own request, shot down two MIGs bringing his score to nine destroyed, three probably destroyed and seven damaged.

Major Jack E. Mass of Red Bank, N. J., also shot down two Communist planes came out of their sanctuary beyond the Yalu River and indicated they wanted a fight. They got more than they bargained for.

Sabrejets sent five hurtling to earth in morning battles and damaged another. The MIGs came back in the afternoon and lost seven more off her expensive jobs. In deadly duels with the Sabres.

Most of the action was above Sinuiju near the Manchurian border on the west coast of North Korea.

First Lt. Merton E. Ricker of Burlington, Vt., said he chased his MIG through a spin and pull up, "pooping him all the way."

"He lit up like a Christmas tree," Ricker said.

The Sabrejets "big kill" came after night-flying Superforts from medium bombers in east coast strikes while others hit central and western battlefront targets.

The biggest round battle took place when 22 Chinese Communists were killed in a brief attack. South Koreans carried out two raids at the postime eastern tip of the front killing 20 North Koreans and destroying eight bunkers.

Taking No Chances As "Bombs" Are Heard

NEW YORK May 26 (UP)—Postal officials hustled some 30 employees to the street Monday night and called the police bomb squad when they heard a buzzing sound coming from two identical boxes.

Detective John J. Barry carried the boxes to a vacant lot and unwrapped them.

Inside he found two toy telephone switchboards, both buzzing. Barry said the packages, being mailed to a toy shop in Evanston, Ill., were shaken up in handling and the batteries on both sets short circuited.

Which? Buy Good Farm Or Improve Poor Land

Is it better to buy good land to try to improve a rundown farm?

Answer by Prof. Lawrence A. Bradford, University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics:

"The choice depends upon the buyer. One having the money to tide over, can spend for soil improvement and wait for the improvement to make returns. But if one must go deeply in debt he must have faster returns. The decision is a matter of time. How long can I wait? How soon must I have funds—for the family, funds for debts, funds for building improvements, funds for emergencies?"

"Another consideration is the amount of funds that can be borrowed. A larger part of the total money needed can be safely borrowed for improved farms of good soils than can be borrowed for rundown farms and for improving poor soils. The main difference will rest with the man and the amount of working capital he has or can borrow. Farmers short of capital frequently make the mistake of buying poor farms and borrowing to the limit. They then have no funds left for either improvement or good operation."

THE BATTLE OF THE NIGHT

A crash, a flash, and it all started.

"The battle of the night," I could hear.

The guns a crackling from my little cozy place.

I hear a loud crash, and then a flash. It must have been a bomb!

And then I quit day dreaming.

It came to me, it was the rain. I was cozy in my bed.

That's where I like to be in a rain.

Mrs. D. S. Hlyne Of Burma Tells Of Life In Her Native Country At Ladies' Meeting

The following article will be of special interest to the people of Murray who have not had the opportunity of hearing these two Burmese ladies speak since their arrival at Murray State College. The article from the Mayfield Messenger follows:

Mrs. D. S. Hlyne, Rangoon, Burma, home economics supervisor of the Burmese Eastern division, was guest speaker at the general meeting of the Christian Women's Fellowship at the First Christian Church Wednesday night. She was accompanied by Miss D. S. Nyunt, also of Rangoon, home economics lecturer in the State Teachers College there.

The Burmese are studying at Murray State College under the student exchange program, and will later attend the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Miss Aileen Barron, C. W. F. program chairman, introduced the guests.

Although she has been in the United States only three months, the soft spoken supervisor, whose brother is Burmese ambassador to Great Britain, is adept in speaking the English language, having studied it in school. In a charming manner she discussed the geography and customs of her country and readily answered questions asked by the audience. Despite the fact that it was her first experience in talking to a large group of people, either here or in Burma, she spoke with much poise.

The speaker described Burma as a small, mountainous country, five times the size of Kentucky, populated by five tribes who speak different dialects, although the national language is Burmese. She went on to say that English is the only foreign language taught in the schools of Burma.

"According to Mrs. Hlyne, the government is a republic, with a premier and two houses of representatives elected by the people. The status of women in that country is equal to that of men, and they have entered many of the professions."

The population is 80 percent farmers whose main crop is rice, the chief export of the country. Crops are sown and harvested entirely by manual labor. Mrs. Hlyne mentioned difference in the life of a farmer and the wealthy landowner, but is of the opinion that the farmer is content with his lot and unaware of the possibilities of improvement. A contrast was drawn between the majority of the homes—the farmers' bamboo houses with thatched roofs and no furniture—and the landowners' homes which are on the same standard as the nice homes here, with modern conveniences including electricity, which is very expensive there.

Rice is the staple food of Burma, plus as many other dishes as the family can afford, including meat, soup and fish paste, the latter being found in every home.

On the industries mentioned by the Burmese supervisor were the weaving of silk, which is done in the home, and mining.

When questioned as to the religion of the country, Mrs. Hlyne said that Buddhism (she and Miss Nyunt are Buddhists) predominates, but there is a variety of religions, including the Methodist, Baptist, Catholic and Jehovah's Witnesses. Marriage is a civil rather than a religious ceremony in the country—a contract between a man and a woman.

Since last year public education from the first grade through college is free, but not compulsory. There are privately owned nursery schools for children 3½ to 6 years of age.

There are trains, planes and the latest automobiles in Burma—but no television.

At the request of the audience, Mrs. Hlyne spoke some in her native tongue, and Miss Nyunt concluded the program by singing the national song in Burmese.

The Burmese were dressed in native attire consisting of silk "longyees" (wrap-around skirts) and "angyaes"—long sleeved blouses of nylon, adorned with gold buttons set with semi-precious stones and removable for use on other blouses, which are all made by the same pattern. Both wore diamond rings, and earrings, and flowers in their hair. Miss Nyunt wore flat velvet sandals, while Mrs. Hlyne's shoes were high heeled American pumps.

Miss Mae Mallory Barron conducted the devotional at the meeting.

Mrs. Frank Richardson presided at the business session.
